

the real world, the specter of crypto-anonymity is the danger of providing the ability to interact with each other in a total, anonymous, untraceable way. Banks, conduct business, and regulate. The True Name, or legal identity, of the user will be untraceable, via extensive criminal investigations which implement cryptographic tools. Reputations will be lost, even the credit ratings of individuals. The power of government regulation is being challenged, the ability to keep information secret, and all the other